

AES

Atlantic Eye Symposium
www.atlanticeye.ca

Dr. Mahshad Darvish is an Assistant Professor at the Department of Ophthalmology at McGill University, a former Program Director of the ophthalmology residency program and the current Fellowship Director of the Cornea fellowship. He has a cornea and anterior segment practice at the Jewish General Hospital and McGill University Health Center in Montreal, Canada. He completed his undergraduate studies at the University of British Columbia, he then completed his medical school, residency and Masters of Business Administration (MBA) at McGill University and his cornea fellowship at the Cincinnati Eye Institute with Dr. Edward Holland. His areas of interest include corneal transplantation, anterior segment surgery and medical education.